1. PURPOSE

- 1.1. To appoint a professional service provider to investigate the decline of timber plantations in South Africa for a period of six (6) months.

2. INTRODUCTION AND BACKGROUND

- 2.1. The National Forest Act, 1998 (Act No.84 of 1998), as Amended, mandates that the Department ensure the sustainable management and development of the Republic for the benefit of all.
- 2.2. South Africa is a lightly forested country with a plantation area of about 1.27 million ha, equivalent to about 1% of the total South African land. In South Africa, the goal of forestry and associated industries is to ensure the growth, improvement, and capitalisation of new opportunities whilst contributing to prosperity and the quality of life in rural South Africa. The goal includes other benefits such as carbon sequestration and biodiversity conservation. Forests are renewable ecosystems capable of providing various environmental, economic, social and cultural benefits (National Forest Act, 1998). Broadly, there are three categories of forests: indigenous forests, woodlands, and plantation forests.
- 2.3. The sector contributes about 1% of the country's GDP (DFFE, 2020)¹. Most of South Africa's forestry plantations are in remote/rural areas of Mpumalanga and KwaZulu-Natal. Other plantations are spread across the Eastern Cape, Limpopo, and the Western Cape. The South African plantation forestry industry employs about 160,000 people on its entire value chain, including activities on the plantations, poles, pulp, paper industry, sawmilling, timber board and timber mining.
- 2.4. The project builds on experience gained through a number of outdated studies that have been done over the past. Therefore, it's vital to extract current data to update information and ensure sustainable forest management. This service is highly specialised in that it requires competency in the field of research, in-depth experience and a track record in Agriculture, Forestry and other Environmental issues, as the decline of forestry is negatively impacting the demand and supply of timber in South Africa. Currently, the demand for Roundwood amounts to 23 million m³/p.a. whereas the forests can only supply 20 million m³ sustainably. Over the last five years, the average net increase in planted area has amounted to not more than 500 hectares p.a., leading to an ever-widening supply deficit. To meet current and anticipated growth over the next 25 to 30 years, South Africa should increase the planted area by a minimum of 25,000 hectares per annum. South Africa, therefore, faces a severe timber availability outlook, which will necessitate a dramatic escalation of timber imports in the coming years.

¹ Department of Forestry, Fisheries and the Environment (2020): Abstract of South African Forestry Facts for the Year 2020/2019.

3. OBJECTIVES

- 3.1. The main objective is to appoint a suitable PSP to assist the Department in investigating the decline of plantation forestry in the country through data collection and analysis, compiling a report on the findings, and providing recommendations for the Department.

4. SCOPE AND EXTENT OF WORK

- 4.1 The appointed service provider will assist DFFE in developing the report on the status quo of timber plantations' decline in South Africa and provide recommendations to assist the department in ensuring sustainable management and development of forestry in the republic.
- 4.2 Amongst others, possible factors to consider should include:
- 4.2.1 The context of plantation area in terms of national data of land cover, using Natural Capital Accounting (NCA).
 - 4.2.2 NCA includes accounting for environmental assets (e.g., water, minerals, and energy), with an international standard, the System of Environmental-Economic Accounting (SEEA), in place for these accounts.
 - 4.2.3 Natural Capital Accounting and Valuation of Ecosystem Services (NCAVES) project
 - 4.2.4 Land cover classes and changes since 1990, Terrestrial biomes of Southern Africa, Data on changes in plantation area, Plantation ownership
 - 4.2.5 Reasons for decline in the context of overall changes in land cover include impacts on biodiversity (real and perceived), water reserves, pests and diseases, climate change, changes in land ownership, fire, theft, and physical damage.
 - 4.2.6 Mitigation options, opportunities and future threats
